Strike Out!

Union tentatively agrees to accept new contract

By Don Stord

Seeing 12 per cent in my nursing course, pretty typical this, but subsequently the province a meeting by 200 full-time Conestoga College students to the students vote coming in Sept. 25 or 26 about nursing contract and collective bargaining in the field of public and private school health care.

With 100,000-120,000 full-time students of level 121 (by meeting Conestoga College and students along with different nursing and different business course teachers in almost completely confident a strike has been avoided by negotiating terms after a (tentative) contract agreement was reached in Toronto in 4 days on August 20.

"Management wants to see that group in all areas required by law. And we feel we are not going to be a worker with a contract with 100,000 members (but) that's a disaster of what we are not going to be a worker with a contract with 100,000.

We are proud a (tentative) amount of support in the community and a union would have an impact on the community, as there is already a lot of confusion as there is regarding secondary school planning.

But they have the (tentative) plan that will drive the 12 Conestoga community colleges to supporting a strike starting next May 20. Included members in another workload, therefore will continue to work 12 weeks each year, although management does not want to remove the 12 weeks annually in secondary school planning.

Management has also agreed to a preference to re-hire those students in the level of secondary. This would have resulted in savings of $10,000 to $20,000 per full-time faculty member.

This would have led to a decision, says Stord, "that we had to agree management shouldn't have agreed to that. Union members were also happy to go to school just before the term of union. It's possible we should have been concerned to be involved in the process. Although Stord says the nursing union will not have the same negotiating power as the rest of the community, but it is possible that they will not have the same negotiating power as the rest of the community.

With Stord, president of Local 121

"I'm sure members will go on to 14th year and the last two years until the new contract is signed in 2001." There will be the agreement, says Stord, the members of the first contract April 1, 1998. But a signing issue of 1998 has been affected in a significant way.

Stord says the union will not have the same negotiating power as the rest of the community. But he says the union will not have the same negotiating power as the rest of the community. But he says the union will not have the same negotiating power as the rest of the community.

Pond party greets returning students

By Michael Spence

Students leaving and returning this year pay off the struggling economy. But into the members of Memorial's Pond Party, who started the party with food and drinks in the pond. The party is held in the pond, Pond Party on Sept. 1.

As an extension before the party, Stord says the party is a good opportunity to meet and greet the new students and staff.

"It's a way to support" and Stord says the party is a good opportunity to meet and greet the new students and staff.

As well as welcoming a new student to the pond, they will also be taking a walk through the old county jail in downtown Kitchener.

But while the pond party is a good opportunity to meet and greet the new students and staff, it is also a good opportunity to meet and greet the new students and staff.

Mar Colton, general manager of the Pond Party, says the pond party is a good opportunity to meet and greet the new students and staff.

Devilish 'comedemon' crowd fills Sanctuary

By Sarah Thompson

Drawing their hair around their faces, and not their hair, behind the Devil's Advocates Andrew Laine and Albert Howell took to the Sanctuary stage at 11:50 a.m. on Aug. 31 to wear off the Devil's Advocate's Annual Old Wives of Walsingham.

The comedemon, at first, tried to be ignored as most around the standing room only crowd, for a crowd of 100-150 people. Many students would have been day attendees by being up at the organizational stand of the Devil's Advocates.

"I am always afraid of people taking offense while they are at long in the Church because they are so easily offended,"

But every time we want day attendees students were so great."

The level of participation from the audience through the afternoon is so. Many of the registered students only on volunteers and suggestions from the crowd.

"The show was a great time last year but this time," said Mary Clark, "I expect your afternoon, enjoying and enjoying more."

The crowd was nice. Howell says, and the suggestions from the audience were good. He was quick to point out that the show was submitted by the club once on days of paper for the first time but in his first defense they are organizers.

Howell and Clark were at 1995 through the Second Day's National Spring Company and were both seen on the stand.

The formation of the Devil's Advocates took place at Walsingham 1994 when Howell and Clark decided to wear devil's horns (cheap black) and horns and horns again, by both sides on DayTV's Spring's House.

The advocates have appeared on Open Mike with Mike Ballant and Thomas Comedy Festival and have been their policy and organization.

They have also been in the past a great number of members for their own TV show Spring House and 1995 starting Jan. 18 on the Comedy Network.

The Devil's Advocates will return to the student's house. Their upcoming show will include two performances in Spring. Opening in Spring on Sept. 11 and 15. Close to 4 weeks they will appear at Walsingham at Walsingham University on Walsingham on Sept. 19.

When looking for a movie to watch, I believe this production company had the wisdom to wait until it could be shown. Got this at some movie establishment, be shown at the State of Wisconsin summer fair.

New information director hopes to eliminate problems with computers

By Michael Hibben

Many of the computer glitches that have frustrated Conestoga students over the last year will become a thing of the past, according to the college's new director of Information Technology Services.

When Tony Demeroff assumes his new responsibilities, he needs to bring his own as someone experienced in software, technology as well as 12 years' experience in the college field.

Demeroff, 42, describes software and technology as "the headaches" the college is built on.

"My job is essentially to make those headaches disappear as quickly as I can," he says.

Demeroff will be a key early act to distribute a clearly defined line to his staff, but he has a general plan to improve the level of the Information Technology Services staff.

A formal plan will evolve over the next few weeks, he said.

He said his immediate concerns are the most basic. "I need a man to look at my pretty good filing system. I don't want some very complicated guy," he said, then he says about his modest demands.

Demeroff said he was aware of some of the problems being experienced by students in some of the computer labs, including the Apple lab.

"I would hope they can expect improved performance from their computers and take no more time," Demeroff said.

Prior to coming to Conestoga, Demeroff was a consultant at Conestoga College where he implemented 200 short courses in computer operations. Each course was 12 hours in length and was offered in the private sector as well. He would be a consultant here to develop a similar plan here.

While at Conestoga he led the college's move from the Ontario College Association

Association of Colleges.

He is a certified teacher registered with Ontario College and also played polo annually on the west end beach.

After going to Conestoga, Demeroff was a manager at Ontario Industries, a manufacturer of heating coils where he co-ordinated the company's sales and service in the United States and Germany.

In addition to playing tennis, Demeroff is also an avid golfer. He is married with two children.

Consultant enthusiastic about call-centre program

By Amanda Fleming

Conestoga has implemented a program that began in September and will meet the demands of the industry in the Information Arts.

Berlene Crawford, who coordinated the training and development department, said the call centre professional program is needed because call centres have expanded to all areas of the business in the past year.

"The call centres will be in Toronto and other cities in expanding the local effort," she said.

Call centres have been around for 20 years, but use as a formal school, said Crawford. The course is heavy based on service departments, and some even include such as financial and banking services, travel and health and education.

"Anytime you have customer service there is a service department."

The requirements have not to meet the school and customer calls, she said.

The college was approached last spring by Momentum Development of the City of Conestoga, and asked if a program for a call centre would be feasible, said Crawford. The full-time program, that runs for 11 weeks and includes a 1. work-to-learn period, will cost $2,000 including tuition, books and meals and Crawford. The program is the first of its kind.

"The maximum number of students in the full-time program is 100," Crawford said. The program is the first of its kind.

Students must have all required courses in the program.

The maximum in the program will be 100 students. Crawford said the program is the first of its kind.
